PREMIERSHIP PORTFOLIO TO TANG SHAO-YI, LI ANNOUNCES

Choice Of Temporary Incumbent Stumbling Block

M.P.'S WANT WANG

President Is Keen For Dr. W. W. Yen To Continue

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, July 26.—It is officially announced that President Li Yuan-hung will nominate Mr. Tang Shao-yi as the permanent Premier but the question of the Acting Premier has not yet been decided. The members of Parliament favor Mr. Wang Chung-hui whereas, it is understood, President Li Yuan-hung wants Dr. W. W. Yen. It is officially anticipated that Mr. Tang Kang will decline to enter the next Cabinet. Dr. Wellington Koo has been confidently mentioned as the Minister of Finance. Other changes will also take place.
It is unofficially stated that General Tiao Kun now favors the appointment of General Chang Shou-ting as Premier probably owing to General Chang's connection with the Lushan Conference as it is almost universally predicted in North China that a national conference will be arranged as soon as the Cabinet has been settled.

M.P.'S LEAVING PEKING, LIVING COSTS TOO HIGH

Quorum By August First Regarded As Problematical

(China Press Service)
Peking, July 26.—About sixty members of Parliament have packed up their beds and bedding and departed for their provincial homes. As a result of this, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Mr. Ching-shan, was none too positive when in reply to President Li's inquiry as to whether a quorum would be secured on August first, he replied that he believed so.

The departing M.P.'s apparently found living too costly in the capital in view of the small amount of money that was in sight as far as the Government was concerned. A fat job at home had much more of an appeal than a lean one, however patriotic, in Peking.

Last Wednesday the President had a confab with Speaker Wu as to the possibilities of opening Parliament on August first with the result above mentioned. Mr. Wu said the first business to receive attention would be the drafting of the constitution and approval of a new members. When asked by President Li what he proposed to do, a quorum was not available, Mr. Wu was not definite.

If a quorum cannot be effected, and in higher Parliamentary circles it is felt very unlikely that it can by the time set, the present Yen Cabinet will continue in office. This fact will prolong the discussion of its successor. In an endeavor to find a capable man who would be acceptable to the Southern forces, Dr. Wang Chung-hui was approached of see how he would feel toward being the man to form the new Cabinet. It is reported that Dr. Wang did not seem very keen on the idea. He is a native of Kwangtung, hence his southern sympathies.

Peking, July 26.—General Wu Pei-fu is due to arrive at Hankow tomorrow. It is believed that he intends to go on to Kiangsi and take a more active interest in the situation there owing to the important bearing of the situation in Kiangsi on the position of Kwangtung.
Despite the involved situation generally, hope of reunification is again manifest in official circles which have been very despondent in that connection.

2 SCHOLARSHIPS ARE MEMORIAL TO GEORGE LANNING

Fund Raised By Old Pupils To Be Administered By Council Officials

Announcement is made in today's issue of the Municipal Gazette that several old pupils of the late Mr. George Lanning who have been responsible for raising the George Lanning Memorial Fund, intend to found two scholarships, one for the Public School for Boys and one for the Public School for Girls, to be given to the student of each school who the Headmaster or the Headmistress recommends.

The scholarship for each school shall be $100 each year. In a recent communication that was addressed to the Council by Mr. G. B. Fryer, Honorary Secretary and Treasurer of the George Lanning Memorial Fund, the request was made that the Chairman and the Secretary for the time being of the Council act as trustees for this fund.

In accepting the trust Mr. N. O. Liddell, Secretary of the Council and Commissioner General, writing to Mr. Fryer said: "In reply I am directed to inform you that the Permanent Education and Foreign Educational Committee, and the Council consider that these Scholarships should assist very materially in furthering foreign education in the Settlement, and that your suggestion that the Trust should be undertaken by the Chairman and Secretary for the time being of the Council has been approved, on the basis that they shall stand possessed of the Trust Investments (which these shall have power to divide the annual income arising therefrom equally between the two scholarships winners. It is recommended that it is not the intention of the Council to have the scholarships should be restricted in any manner as to the enrollment of students."

If a quorum cannot be effected, and in higher Parliamentary circles it is felt very unlikely that it can by the time set, the present Yen Cabinet will continue in office. This fact will prolong the discussion of its successor. In an endeavor to find a capable man who would be acceptable to the Southern forces, Dr. Wang Chung-hui was approached of see how he would feel toward being the man to form the new Cabinet. BLAND AGAINST GIFT OF BOXER FUND TO CHINESE

Says Return Of Fund Would Not With Good Will.

(Reuter's Service)
London, July 26.—In a letter published in the Times, Mr. J. O. P. Bland, dealing with the proposal to apply the Boxer indemnities to the education of Chinese students in England, points out that while British national expenditure on education is curtailed on the ground of economy, the Peking Government is spending $198,000,000 for military purposes against $6,500,000 for education.

He says that there will be time enough to ask us to subsidize the education of expectant mandarins when these figures have been reversed and the authorities of China satisfactorily proved their ability to handle educational and other grants with unquestionable integrity.

He declares that there is no self-evident justification of the assumption that the grateful goodwill of the Chinese can be secured by giving them educational facilities and that all evidence available in China points to the other way. Japan has educated far more Chinese students than any other country without greatly endearing herself to the Chinese. The number of students who become traders after being educated in England or America is almost negligible. He has never known a case in which goodwill is determined by traders with educational antecedents. The class of Chinese seeking the free educational facilities of England and America is the semi-Europeanized class—sons of officials and rich merchants who aspire to rule the country and whose aspirations are regarded by many competent observers as a very grave source of danger to China because the fulfillment of their ambitions means the creation of a privileged ruling class entirely out of sympathy with the Chinese.

In conclusion Mr. J. O. P. Bland says that modernizing young China should be done at home and the education of the country's future rulers should be as far as possible be a self-supporting national undertaking rather than a corruptive of competitive foreign propaganda.

LOBINGIER ON U. S. STRIKES BENCH AGAIN BRING CRISIS, AFTER NEARLY GOVERNMENT YEAR'S DELAY TO TAKE RY'S

U. S. Court Functioning—Five Cases Heard

BOYD'S CASE UP BUYING ABROAD

Two Seamen Dismissed, Others Must Give Bond

Eighteen hours after his arrival here from the United States Judge C. S. Lobingier took the bench yesterday and set in motion the machinery of the United States Court for China that has been idle for nearly a year through the period of Judge Lobingier's absence in America.

In accordance with Judge Lobingier's announced purpose to dispose of the criminal calendar before taking up civil cases five criminal hearings were heard yesterday at the one session of the court which was held in the morning. Most important of these was that of Ralph S. Boyd, who is charged with embezzlement. After Boyd had been arraigned and had entered a plea of not guilty on request of United States District Attorney Leonard Russer, who said that an important witness was away from Shanghai, the hearing was continued for ten days.

In addition to the charge of embezzlement Boyd may be called to answer an additional charge of jail breaking as he is the prisoner who a week ago cut through the ceiling and escaped over the roof of the American prison with David Lightner, fugitive from Portland, Oregon who was arrested here and who still is at large.

Other hearings held yesterday by Judge Lobingier were ordinary cases of vagrancy in which seamen were defendants. Two of these Richard Nordheim and George Donack were given 24 hours within which to give bond guaranteeing good conduct and the charge against the other two, W. R. Tracy and Matthew Du Shane, were dismissed.

REFERENCE TO LINCOLN CAUSES CHURCH "SCENE"

Hearers Object To Minister's Citation Of Martyr

(China Press Service)
Peking, July 23.—"I think you owe an apology not only to Abraham Lincoln, of whom you just spoke, but also to everyone in this church." This unexpected reply from a member of his congregation was called forth by some of Dr. A. C. Dixon's remarks in a lecture in the series being given under the auspices of the Stewart Evangelical Fund at Rocky Point, Peking.

Dr. Dixon was speaking of the importance of identifying oneself with the Christian Church and its work. Good works alone would not do, he said, and he cited the instance of Abraham Lincoln, who though full of Christian works made the mistake, Dr. Dixon said, of not joining any church.

Abraham Lincoln, Dr. Dixon said, thus made it possible for Robert Ingersoll to say of him that he (Abraham Lincoln) was "the prince of atheists."

Some of the loyal Americans in the audience had grown rather restive under these remarks, and one of them, Dr. H. H. Lowry, of Peking rose to his feet and objected, asking for an apology from the speaker for his remarks about Lincoln. Dr. Dixon replied that he feared he had been misunderstood, that he did not intend to cast any aspersions upon Lincoln.

But Dr. Lowry was not satisfied, and jumping up again told Dr. Dixon quite plainly that the remarks about Lincoln had been misleading and ought never to have been made in such a place.

There were a number of replies and counter-replies before the matter was finally dropped by the preacher and the objector were given a chance to cool off. Dr. Dixon admitted afterwards that he is a southerner, but denied that he has anything other than the most venerable feeling for Lincoln.

SECRETARY DENBY OFF FOR MANILA AFTER VISIT HERE

Aboard Transport Henderson

Following striking farewell ceremonies at the Customs Jetty yesterday morning in which scores of Americans and many Chinese officials took part, Secretary of the Navy Edwin S. Denby went aboard the U. S. Navy Transport Henderson and an hour later sailed for Manila. The U. S. Huron accompanied the naval transport as an escort.

Secretary and Mrs. Denby left the home of U. S. Consul-General Cunningham where they had been guests during their three-day stay in Shanghai at 9:45 o'clock in the morning. A mounted Sikh police guard preceded the motor car in which the American cabinet official rode to the jetty. At the jetty, a special guard of honor sent by General Ho Feng-han, defense commissioner of Shanghai and Sunliang, and the Arsenal band, waited. Special authorization was given by the consular body to permit the entrance of the guard of honor into the Settlement. At the jetty, too, were scores of members of the American community, and representatives of the Chinese Bureau of Foreign Affairs.

As the secretary approached the jetty, the band struck up the American national anthem. With the good wishes of all present, Secretary and Mrs. Denby boarded the launch which took them out to the Henderson.

The Henderson, with Secretary Denby and members of the Annapolis class of 1881 aboard, will return to San Francisco by way of Guam after visiting Manila. The Huron will accompany the Henderson as far as Guam.

He has now returned to Mukden and it is expected that he will point out to General Chang Tso-lin some of the absurdities which recently made General Chang Tso-lin notorious.

MERKULOV'S STEAMER HERE IS RAIDED BY CHITA AGENTS

Gunboat Foils Alleged Attempt To Flee From Shanghai

DISABLE ENGINES

Russ Volunteer Vessel Is Scene Of Pseudo-War

Another colorful chapter in the career of the S. S. Erivan of the Russian Volunteer Fleet, which has been the subject of months of litigation in the Mixed Court, was brought to light yesterday, when reports were circulated that the vessel, now anchored up the river, was the scene of a pseudo-warfare on Tuesday afternoon in which the commander of a gunboat of the Chita Republic, anchored nearby, boarded the ship and removed parts of the machinery in order to prevent the vessel from leaving port under secret.

The alleged raid was said to have been the aftermath of orders sent by the Merkulov government to its ships to return to Vladivostok at once to assist in the evacuation of its forces in view of the nearing withdrawal of the Japanese from the Maritime Province.

The Erivan, which with the S. S. Astrakhan, is now in Shanghai, acknowledges the authority of the Merkulov government. The Erivan, however, as a result of suit brought against it in the Mixed Court, was being held under order of the court pending the outcome of the litigation. About a month ago, in order to avoid congestion on the river, the vessel was permitted to proceed to an anchorage near the Arsenal, in Chinese waters, where it has remained since.

FIVE OTHER SHIPS
In addition to the two vessels here the Merkulov government has three ships in Kobe, one in Hongkong, and one in Chefoo. The latter was recently charged with attempting to seize one of the vessels of the Chita government there.

According to the version of Tuesday's affair which comes from local Russian sources, the orders of the Merkulov government were received by the vessels here on Monday, and the commander of the Erivan began to coal ship secretly Monday night.

The commander of the Admiral Zavoika, a Chita gunboat which had come here from Kamchatka and was anchored near the Erivan, learned of the alleged plan of the officers of the Erivan to slip out of Shanghai despite the orders of the Mixed Court.

Taking the law into his own hands, the commander of the Admiral Zavoika on Tuesday afternoon boarded the Erivan with a party of twelve men. There are various reports of just what followed. According to one version, the Zavoika men were all armed with revolvers and threatened to shoot any of the members of the Erivan crew who attempted to go ashore or signal for aid. This source claims that the Zavoika men found force necessary in some cases and struck several of the members of the Erivan crew with the butts of their revolvers. According to the Zavoika contingent, however, there was no disturbance.

DISABLE ENGINES
Both sides agree that members of the raiding party went below decks and unscrewed several vital parts of the engines, thereby making it impossible for the Erivan to get under steam, and then left the ship.

Following the raid, the commander of the Zavoika is said to have gone to the Chinese Commissioner of Foreign Affairs and made a full report of the action which he had taken, explaining that it was necessary in order to prevent the Erivan from evading jurisdiction of the Mixed Court. The Commissioner is said to have promised to see to it that the vessel does not get under way.

No official report of the alleged raid has been received by either the Municipal Police or the River Police as yet.

Thomson On Stand Tells How Master's Certificate Was Given To Him In U.S.

Defendant Accused Of Forging Papers As Captain, And With Uttering Them Here Testified In British Supreme Court

John Thomson, who is charged with the forgery of an American master's certificate, was called to the stand in his own defense yesterday in the British Supreme Court before Judge Peter Glyn and entered a general denial of the charges.

Mr. A. G. Mossop, as Acting Crown Advocate is prosecuting and the defendant is represented by Mr. Ronald G. MacDonald. The jury hearing the case is composed of Messrs. R. C. Howlett, F. A. Sampson, P. H. Cole, R. C. Rachwalley and S. J. Powell.

Mr. T. W. Bowers, of Bowers and Company and Mr. E. A. H. Sly, acting British Consul at Chikiang, who in 1918 was Shipping Vice Consul at Shanghai were the main witnesses called for the prosecution. Mr. Bowers told in detail of an appointment as master of a ship he owned, the Rotoura, that he had tendered to Mr. Thomson, subject to the approval of the Yangtze Insurance Association.

CERTIFICATE REQUIRED
What were the terms of the appointment? Notification as to change of master had to be given to the Yangtze Insurance Association and the appointment was subject to their approval. I went to the Kiangnan Dock, where the vessel was being inspected, and introduced Thomson to Mr. Bayes-Davy, the surveyor to the company. He was on the bulk head at the time. Mr. Bayes-Davy told Thomson that he would want to see Thomson's certificate before he could sign on as master of that vessel.

What year was this? April, 1919. Thomson then took an inventory of the equipment on board the vessel and gave it to me the next day. I told him to look for his certificate and he said it was at the Kasee Hotel. The following day he came and said that he had not found the certificate but that he was looking for it. I gave him a note to the Shipping Consul so that he could take command of the vessel until he could produce his certificate.

What happened then? After receiving that note he left the office. That was during the morning. He came back in the afternoon and said he had not found the certificate. But he had a certificate. He showed me two documents: one from Consul Blackburn and one from the late Mr. Everett Fraser. When he showed you these documents what did you say? The other document was a long sheet of foolscap. I advised him to find his certificate and he then said that it was lost on the s.s. Chefoo in a typhoon. It had been washed overboard with other private papers. The vessel was under the Chinese flag.

RAISES QUESTION
Did you make any reply? I said if that was the case how could the certificate be, as he had said, at the Kasee Hotel, if it was lost on the Chefoo. He said that he had applied for another and this was a duplicate. Did you have any other conversation? I suggested that he should go to see the Consul and swear an affidavit as to the loss of the certificate. He promised to do so.

What did he reply to that? He readily replied that he would do so. We went along that afternoon.

Where did you go? First to the general Shipping Office, Mr. Sly, I think, was the Shipping Vice Consul.

Did you see him? Yes. What happened? Thomson stated that he had lost his certificate and he wished to sign an affidavit to that effect.

What happened? Mr. Sly, instructed Mr. Ribeiro to make the affidavit forms. This was done in my and Thomson's presence. Nothing else? It was arranged that we should go there the next morning and sign the affidavit forms.

And? The following morning Thomson called at my office and we went again to Mr. Sly's office. He said the forms were ready to be signed and, Thomson said, "I am not going to sign them." He muttered something else I did not catch. We left the office. Then I wrote to Thomson and cancelled the appointment owing to his not being able to produce his certificate.

In the course of his testimony Mr. Sly who was then called reviewed the incident which the preceding witness had described.

Mr. Sly in reply to Mr. Mossop said that if a certificate was definitely established as lost it could be renewed under the Shipping Merchants Act. Witness had questioned Thomson, who wanted a renewal of his certificate in 1919. In 1918 Thomson was supposed to have lost his certificate and he had ample time to have a renewal. Witness had questioned him regarding this. He wanted to see Thomson's certificate, but Thomson had questioned his authority, so he had reported the whole circumstances to the late Sir Everard Fraser. Fraser stated that it was not the practice for those holding master's certificates to take the position of Master Mariners on vessels.

THOMSON TESTIFIES
When the defendant was called Mr. MacDonald said he would tell a complete story and explain how he obtained his license. The defendant then took the stand.

What are you? Shipmaster.

He said he was born in 1882 and had been at sea since 1895. He was asked to take out American papers in 1914 when at Seattle with the Standard Oil Co. In all, he had spent only three or four weeks in America. In 1917 he was master of the s.s. Chefoo, a Chinese ship; in a typhoon he lost everything on that ship.

Did you lose your papers?—I lost most of them.

He said he had never asked Mr. Bowers for a position as master. He consented to take the s.s. Rotoura when it was offered him but he had no intention of going as master in it. He was later in another Chinese ship but returned to the Chefoo again. At the end of 1919 he left for home via America.

Witness then told of his experiences in America.

SOURCE OF CERTIFICATE
He visited the U. S. Shipping Board offices at San Francisco, Washington and New York and was given his naturalization papers at New York. He was told they wanted him to take a ship to the Clyde and when he went to his hotel one night he found a master's license waiting for him, together with a U. S. S. B. book of instructions and rules. There was also a private letter asking him to go to the Board offices next day.

Witness refused to take a ship to the Clyde as he was going home on holiday. His American papers were delayed and he went to the British Consul and explained the whole thing to him. The Consul said "Why not use your British passport?" Witness did so and returned to Scotland, where he stayed for a year. He returned to the East via America. At San Francisco he saw one of the U. S. S. B. officials he had interviewed on his way home and was told there had been "funny dealings" and several of them thought it was far better to leave the board.

When he got to Hongkong he offered the s.s. Chefoo again, but refused it. In another ship he was offered he was to get the Guild scale of wages but must pay so much back, and he refused to have anything to do with such underhand work.

Handed the licence, accused said he had written "absolutely

Millionaire Red Must Go To Prison

THE Illinois State Supreme Court has upheld the conviction of William Dross Lloyd and eighteen members of the defunct Communist Labor Party, and they must serve prison sentences for advocating overthrow of the Government. Lloyd is the millionaire son of the late Henry D. Lloyd, newspaperman, who married a daughter of ex-Governor Brooks. Mr. Brooks was part owner of the Chicago Tribune. Lloyd was sentenced to from one to five years and to pay a fine of $2,000.

nothing on it nor had he altered it in any way. He had never seen the signatures of the inspectors anywhere else. He had not looked at the licence more than a dozen times altogether.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

In the course of his cross-examination Mr. Mossop reviewed in detail documents signed by and said to have been signed by the defendant.

From October 8, 1915, to January 26, 1916 were you second mate on the Hsin Peking?—No.

You deny that?—Yes.

You absolutely deny that?—Yes. Butterfield and Swire records will prove that.

His mate's certificate in New Zealand was the only one he ever had, except the American licence. After 1912, witness worked in the Yukon district of Alaska. He came to Shanghai in October, 1915, and joined the Guild in November or December. He could not account for the application to the Guild not being in his handwriting.

Do you suggest it has been put on the files of the Guild to do you harm?—I suggest nothing.

He was later first mate of the Sagittarius.

He joined the Alma, a British ship, in Dairen later.

That was the first time you had ever been master of a British ship?—Yes.

What did you tell the Consul there?—I had nothing to do with it.

He had never told Mr. Blackburn he had an extra master's certificate. Mr. Blackburn must have made a mistake in putting these words on a document he issued to witness. Witness knew he was not entitled to that document. He had not asked for it: it had been sent to him.

Referring to the loss of papers from the s.s. Chefoo, Mr. Mossop said: I have never been able to find out what you actually did lose in that typhoon because you now seem to have all the important papers still in your possession.—I lost my recommendations.

He did not think Mr. Blackburn had made up the statement about having an extra master's certificate. Witness added that he did not tell Mr. Sly he was in possession of an extra master's certificate issued in New Zealand, No. 57. You say Mr. Sly is deliberately stating an untruth?—He is. Witness again added that he would not like to divulge all that happened.

Bonomi Declines To Form Cabinet

(Reuter's Service)
Rome, July 26.—As a result of the obstruction of the Social Democrats, Signor Bonomi has abandoned the task of forming the Cabinet.

An intelligent appreciation of the situation is given by the veteran, Signor Giolitti, a former Premier, writing from Vihi. "Thank God I am outside the parliamentary situation which presents no possibility of a solution responding to the true interests of the country."

A Milan message states that the Fascist has occupied Gualpusterengo midway between Milan and Piacenza, which, with other recent activities seems to confirm the Fascist threats to encircle and isolate Milan. The state of feeling in the Capital is shown by a journalist of a Socialist newspaper, who has challenged the Fascist leader, Signor Mussolini to a duel. Signor Mussolini has accepted the challenge.

New Features For Del Monte Show

An entirely new show, with several added attractions will be staged at the Del Monte Cafe Saturday night when the "Summer Follies" goes into its fifth week in Shanghai. Among the new performers to appear next week are the Clarks, who will stage their "apricot dance" as a special added attraction. The excellence of "The Summer Follies" in the minds of Shanghai amusement-seekers is attested by the crowds to be seen nightly at the Del Monte.

TRAVEL IN AND OUT OF EAST U. S. PORTS DECLINES

Immigration Law Cuts One Third From Steamship Traffic

(Reuter's Service)
New York, June 26.—The New York Journal of Commerce states that ocean travel by steamship lines plying in and out of Atlantic ports during the year ending June 30 totalled $23,338 persons. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1921, the total travel was 1,303,979, showing a new loss for the year now near at end of 480,441.

The comparison of this year and last is indicative, in a measure at least, of the effect of the 2 percent immigration restriction laws. The year 1920-21, it is pointed out, showed an increase of arrivals over departures of 360,371 persons, while this past year, with the immigration provisions applying, the total westbound was 286,682, with the eastbound 436,656, or a net loss to the country in immigration through Atlantic ports of 49,974. From a steamship point of view the figures indicate, a representative of the steamship companies said, a loss of approximately one-third of their business.

Discussing the situation generally, one of the steamship men said that from an alien labor point of view and the purpose of the law to restrict immigration, it appears that the law has overreached itself.

"It was the intention of Congress," he added, "to restrict immigration by the 3 percent act to about 350,000 a year but on account of no allowance being made for the departures in reckoning national quotas the net immigration for the year will be less than 100,000. The steamship companies not only lose a considerable volume of business but it is evident that industries will be deprived of about two-thirds of the number assured them by the 3 percent act."

Weather Forecasts At Long Range

Forecasting the weather in advance is a possible development of the future, J. S. Ricard, S. J. of the University of Santa Clara, California, declared before the American Meteorological Society recently. Sun spots and signs on the planets will undoubtedly aid in such predictions.

"Storms and counter-storms are the immediate factors in the weather and we can base our short range prediction largely upon them," he said. "In order to make long range forecasts it is necessary to know the remote factors. This is entirely possible, for no realm in Nature is lawless, and a law controls the weather. It is the business of the meteorologist by observation of phenomena to work out these laws scientifically. He does not have to bother about the why and wherefore; that is for another and higher branch of science."

800 BOATMEN ON STRIKE; INCREASE OF 30% IS ASKED

Service Of Shanghai Tug And Lighter Co. Crippled As Sailors Walkout

Five hundred boatmen employed on 102 boats of the Shanghai Tug and Lighter Company went on strike yesterday morning as a result of the refusal of the management to meet their demand for an increase of pay from $5.50 to $7.50 per month per man.

With the aid of the laodahs, the company was able to carry on a restricted service. Meanwhile negotiations are being conducted for the return of the sailors on a compromise.

About 300 other boatmen employed by Chinese shipping companies have demanded an increase of 30 percent of their wages. The matter is now under negotiation and it is expected that their demand will be partially met.

Registration required by the Central Garage of chauffeurs to furnish their names, home and Shanghai addresses and other information was enforced by the garage management yesterday after the organized attempt of the chauffeurs had collapsed. Through tactics applied by Mr. A. V. White, the manager, the chauffeurs gave in and agreed to furnish the desired information.

BRITISH LIQUOR INTERESTS GLOOMY

London.—The makers and sellers of alcoholic liquor in the United Kingdom are having anything but a restful time just now. Having always before them the possibility of prohibition, they view with growing alarm the increasing unity and concentration of the enemies of drink. The success already achieved by the five years educational temperance campaign, launched last July by the president of the Wesleyan Conference, has led to the inauguration of a national anti-drink campaign, in which all temperance organizations and all churches are uniting.

Its threefold aim is to present in effective form the modern indictment of strong drink, to rally support for a legislative program, and to elicit financial support. The Wesleyans' appeal for $5,000 a year for five years already has resulted in £15,000 being paid in or promised. The brewers' daily organ, The Morning Advertiser, alleges that the ultimate aim of the campaign is "the promotion of prohibition," and its organizers cheerfully admit the impeachment.

The method and aim of the campaign will be definitely educational. It will seek to impart exact knowledge with regard to the use and effect of alcohol, and to train and equip a force capable of making a swift fight against the drink evil.

It is significant that the press boycott against prohibition is being relaxed. News item about the movement, on both sides of the Atlantic, are finding their way much more freely than hitherto into British newspapers, and a desire is growing for the formation in Britain of an organization corresponding to that of the Anti-Saloon League of America. Much interest is evident in the extension of the operations of the World League Against Alcoholism, and many people on this side are eager to co-operate with it.

"Pussfoot" Johnson is expected in England about the middle of June. The accumulating evidence now reaching England of the beneficial results which follow prohibition of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquor is doing much to mold public opinion in its favor.

Prof. Gilbert Murray has made public protest against the refusal of the Court of Referees to meet the objection of an unemployed man, a teetotaler, who had conscientious scruples against working in a brewery.

"I have long known," he says, "that in this country it was highly dangerous for a poor man to offend the authorities of the drink trade, and hope I have always borne myself prudently and humbly in that knowledge; but I confess I have been surprised at a case under the Unemployment Insurance Acts which has recently been brought to my notice."

He goes on to state that an Oxford workman had been for a long time unemployed. He had good references and an excellent character—except that he was known to be a strong teetotaler. He received unemployment benefit for a time, and then was offered by the Labor Exchange a job in a brewery. This he refused. He thereupon was treated as having committed a disciplinary offense, was struck off the list for employment, and deprived of unemployment pay for six weeks. He appealed to the Court of Referees, but the appeal was disallowed. Dr. Murray complains that it is "monstrous" that a Labor Exchange should have the power of keeping teetotalers, because they act as teetotalers, out of work and at the same time of depriving them of their unemployment benefit. The Ministry of Labor has promised to inquire into the matter, and a

HOW TO "GROW" A NEW COMPLEXION

These are the days of "hustling." In a week we see and do more than our grandmothers did in a year. We are gradually turning nature to be our servant; we use her great forces against herself. We have conquered sea and sky, now our doctors are fighting not only disease, but old age. There is talk of rejuvenating human beings by the injection of animal glands, but as yet, only the few can avail themselves of the treatment.

There is, however, one secret of perpetual youth that is in the reach of everyone. Scientists now realize that the only way of keeping the skin young and fresh is to examine Nature's methods and to find some way of imitating her.

SCIENTIFIC BEAUTY. In order to explain the new method of keeping the complexion perpetually youthful, one must understand something of the nature of the skin. A baby's skin is always clear and smooth because the outer layer is always invisibly peeling off, and new layers are forming just as fast underneath, so that the exposed skin is always fresh, uncrinkled and "new."

For the first few years of our lives, this peeling is a purely natural process, but as we grow older, we gradually lose the power of throwing off our old soiled outer skins, so that our complexions become lined and yellow, and the new skin has no chance to show itself.

A few years ago, a scientific chemist realized that a little-known substance called mercolised wax, was exactly what was needed to "keep nature up to the mark." It appears that this substance, which is now universally obtainable, gently and painlessly assists nature in throwing off the soiled outer cuticle. The skin is thus perpetually renewed, and a clear youthful complexion can be preserved to any age. (Advt.)

WITNESS TELLS OF GUN PLAY AT EGYPT SINKING

Captain Collier Tells Of Tragic Scenes At Collision

London, July 25.—At the resumed enquiry into the loss of the Egypt today, Captain Collier, continuing his evidence, said that prior to putting off the boats he saw the officers on the port boatdeck getting the firemen and trimmers out of the boats. He did not see whether they were Indians.

He did not notice any revolver shooting or knife. When witness was dragged into a lifeboat, he took command. He was given a revolver by Captain Carr, which, he was told, had been used to fire over the heads of the crew to compel them to make way for the ladies.

Replying to a representative of the Amalgamated Marine Workers' Union, Captain Collier said that Lascares were best fitted for work on the London-Bombay route. There was not much to choose in case of accidents between Lascares properly led and white men.

The accident to the Egypt was abnormal and even if the crew had been entirely white, the loss of life would have been the same. It was mostly to be attributed to the list preventing access to the boats.

Captain Collier explained that the confusion, through which the crews of the boats were not at their proper stations, was due to the desire to get out of the ship before it turned turtle. Pressed to explain this want of discipline witness replied:

"They were simply terrified, not merely the natives, but many of the Europeans."

He added that the passengers jumped overboard from all angles before the ship turned turtle. Everybody seemed to be crouching in terror. He himself was on the bridge and wondered how he was going to get away.

The chief officer, Mr. Cartwright, said that two days before the collision he gave the Lascares boat-drill lasting ten minutes. He did not think that the men would have gone to their stations better if there had been more boat-drill at Suez.

Mr. Cartwright said that at the time of the explosion when the order of boat stations was given he was unable to find the Lascares.

Witness expressed the opinion that discipline had failed because everything was so sudden. The human element must be taken into account.

The Lascares whom he saw after they had been picked up were terror-stricken and useless. The white crew were not terror-stricken, but jumpy and nervous.

It was the work of the white officers, quartermasters, engineers and stewards that enabled the boats to be put out.

The enquiry was adjourned.

New Site And Building Required To House
1000 Chinese Boys

The faculty of St. Francis Xavier's College was host to a representative gathering of prominent local Chinese and Chinese alumni at a banquet held Wednesday night at the college building, Nanjing Road.

General Ho Feng-lin, Mr. Sung Har-chang, Chairman of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Luo Pak-hung, Managing Director of the Chinese Tram Car Company in the City all delivered addresses pledging their support to the new undertaking which, they declare, is worthy of support in view of the excellent educational work which the Marist Brothers have done in China.

Francis Zia and Michael Ting spoke on behalf of the alumni and offered wholehearted support and co-operation of the alumni to make the campaign of fund-raising a success. They appealed to the prominent Chinese present as representatives of the official, commercial and journalistic elements of the Chinese community to give the campaign-workers their full moral support, and paid a tribute to the Brothers for what they have achieved in training young men for responsible positions in the various walks of life.

Bro. Antonin reported with regret that in February last no less than 600 Chinese students and teachers had been turned away because there was no room for them. The scheme in view is to raise some $200,000 for the purchase of about 30 mow of land for the erection of a new school for Chinese boys capable for providing accommodation for a total attendance of 1,000.

Parbury Wins To Singles Finals By Win Over W. P. Roberts, By 6-3, 6-4, 8-6

To Play J. L. Wade On S. C. C. Courts For Title Tomorrow At 5

Mr. L. Parbury who has played such brilliant tennis on local courts this year, won the finals for the singles title of the Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association yesterday afternoon on the courts of the Shanghai Cricket Club, over Rev. W. P. Roberts, runner up in 1921 and in 1920 to Champion W. S. R. Pott. The game was finely contested in spite of the fact that Parbury took the match in three straight sets. The score was 6-3, 6-4, 8-6.

Parbury played just a little better tennis throughout the match yesterday than did Roberts. The latter, for the most part played his usual steady and heady game, though at times he was slow or erratic on his defense. The latter however may have been the more apparent because of Parbury's wonderful speed and accuracy on the long court game.

The winner of the match in the first two sets was out to win and with careful play and a fine eye for his opponent's faults he had but little difficulty in taking a commanding lead.

Close interest centered in the final set which Roberts lead off with four straight games. Parbury though starting well with a clean service ace, and carrying through with several clever placements, some of which came after long exchanges, appeared to be playing an easier game. And his play became a trifle careless. Those first four games were lost on his own nets and outs.

Commencing with the fifth game Parbury played the ball harder holding Roberts in the exchange and profiting by faults, until the score was brought to 4-2. In the seventh game Parbury counted two pretty placements which with one netted ball and an outside drive by Roberts brought the count to 4-3.

The eighth game went to eight deuces, before Parbury won it and tied the score for the set at 4-4. It was won on a short placement too difficult for Roberts to return, and a second placement to the left far court line after long and hard play.

Play then settled down to real tournament class with either man trying hard for the set. The games alternated until 6-4, when after a deuce in the 13th Parbury placed two nice balls for the game. In the final game deuce was reached on a placement and two outs by either player when a placement by Parbury and an out by Roberts decided the set, the match and the right to the final.

Parbury will meet John L. Wade, the other finalist who won over B. Krenoff in the odd semi-final. The match will be played on the Shanghai Cricket Club courts tomorrow commencing at 5 o'clock.

SAYS 'BUGS' Baer:

G. FOWLER PLAYS SAFE AS UMPIRE

Calls 'Ball' And 'Strike' On Curve That Never Was Pitched

BY "BUGS" BAER

Dear Folks—

That's a sausage, but Gink Fowler dogged it enough to have been the funniest of the fusties. While visiting Roughtown with a full line of long beards, I found business so slack that burglars were blowing open empty soap boxes.

Thinking that there must be some mistake in the address I went out to see the opening of the Roughtown League. I had heard so much about Gink Fowler that I wanted to see him with his pants on.

While the visiting pitcher was winding up for the first pitch of the riot season, Gink hollered "Strike one." The foreign element objected to that so Gink changed his decision to "Ball one."

This infuriated the Roughtown inmates so much that they established a profit-sharing plan, with Gink getting all the tough dividends.

He went away from there with more speed than control and has nevermore been pined in the haunts of men.

Hoping that you will make the mud thicker.

I remain easily,

BILLY O'NEILL,

West New York Ferry.

Mr. O'Neill's career is a very harassing portion of Gink Fowler's career.

It was his motto that he was always right or wrong. He also boasted that he made but one mistake to a decision. A very fair average for Roughtown.

But that day he had buttered his bread on the wrong foot.

We remember it well and healthy. That day he pulled two boots on the same bunions. What a fall for a proud champ.

Yes ma'am. It was the first time that any ump had spilled two bad decisions on a worse play.

But what scorched it worse was that he pulled two sour labels on a play that never happened. He called strike and ball on a curve that was never pitched.

CALIFORNIA AND JAPS TO PLAY IN WEEK-END GAMES

The California Collegians, composed mostly of varsity players from the University of California, which played a series here recently will probably play the Shanghai nine tomorrow and again Saturday on their way homeward from Manila. The Sunday game will be between the big Shanghai team and an all star Japanese nine, composed chiefly of members of the strong Mitsui Bussan Kaisha club.

Harry Kingman will probably pitch one of the games against his former college, with Scott working in the other and Swann held over for the game with the Japanese on Sunday.

Manager Gallop also announces that he has practically closed arrangements with the Fort Mills team, the champion nine of the Philippines Army league for a six game series commencing the second Saturday in August, and a series with the U. S. Marine Corps from Peking commencing about August 26. The marines have a strong team this year with a record of 16 games won out of 18 played. The series between Shanghai and Peking should decide the championship of China.

Blood Poisoning Yet Another Grand Recovery

Our Patient is Mr. WILLIAM HARBORNE, of 6, Railway Road, Perry Barr, Birmingham, England, who writes:

"About two years ago I met with rather a bad accident. My arm was cut severely, and I had to have it stitched at the hospital. This caused me six weeks' absence from work, and after resuming my duties for one week I broke out all over my body with huge boils. Again I went to the hospital, and was treated for Blood Poisoning; this happened on three successive occasions, until I began to think I should never be cured. Then I gave Clarke's Blood Mixture a trial, and the first bottle or two seemed to be driving out the poison, so I persevered, and after taking ten bottles I was cured. It is now over twelve months since I left off taking your Clarke's Blood Mixture, and I have seen no signs of any further blood disorder."

CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE, by reason of its remarkable blood purifying properties, can be relied upon to give speedy relief and lasting benefit in cases of Eczema, Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Boils, Pimples, Eruptions, Piles, Glandular Swellings, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout, Pains in the back and joints, and all other blood disorders.

Left Handed Crickets Win Over Right Handers By A Score Of 210 Runs To 137

Second Days Play Of Unique Match Gives Southpaws A Big Total

Local left handed cricket men, in the second day of their match played yesterday on the S. C. C. field piled up the fine total of 210 runs as against 137 scored by the club's right handers on Tuesday. The right handers used nine bowlers up before the left handed side was all out.

The match was a unique one and was followed with great interest by a good number of the members. There were not enough real left handers to make out the full eleven, but other players volunteered to either bat or bowl from the left side for the day.

Hill's 71 retired injured was the best batting total for the match. His score with Brooks 64 for the same left handed side did much toward deciding the match. Hawkins with 66 was the outstanding right hander at the bat.

Yesterday's figures follow:

Object To Sale Of Land In Peking

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, July 25.—The Preparatory Committee of the local Self-Government Association has lodged another protest with the authorities at Peking. This second protest is against the sale of land by the Metropolitan Police at the Tungnan Bazaar. The Committee points out to the Ministry of the Interior that this land is public property and should be under the control of the Association. It was placed under police control when Metropolitan Self Government was abolished in the second year of the Republic, but such control gave the police no right to sell. The Committee, therefore, asks for the sale to be stopped and the land to be held by the Ministry of the Interior pending the establishment of local self-government.

PAINFUL JOINTS

In no disease does the blood become thin so rapidly as in rheumatism. Not only does it become thin but it is loaded with impurities—the rheumatic poisons. Without proper treatment these poisons increase, the joints inflame and swell and the patient becomes a cripple.

There are a number of methods of treating rheumatism, most of them aiming to keep down the rheumatic poisons until nature can build up the blood sufficiently to overcome them. But unfavorable conditions of cold or dampness may give the disease the advantage and a relapse or renewed attack follows.

Good, healthy blood increases the resistance to disease. It is easier to keep up this resistance by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, eating proper food, avoiding diet that does not agree with you and getting plenty of fresh air day and night, than it is to cure the disease after it gets a foothold. Keep up the resistance of your body to disease by these tonic pills.

A book, "Hobbies and Health," will be sent free on request by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Sachuen Road, Shanghai. It contains directions regarding diet and hygiene for rheumatic patients. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are obtainable at all druggists, or post free $1.50 per bottle, $8 for 6 bottles, direct from the above address.

U.S. Cotton Traders Now Concerned With Weevil

(Reuter's Service)

New York, June 29.—The principal feature in the cotton market this week has been an evening-up of accounts for the Government report. Considering the improvement in weather conditions, the market has given a fairly good account of itself, and no matter what the Government report may show, it is believed by many well posted traders that the development of weevil activity as the crop progresses will occupy speculative attention and eventually carry prices higher. The insect has occupied a prominent place in a great many of the private reports received during the week and one authority who has spent a good deal of time in the belt estimates that, if unfavorable weather should occur hereafter and the weevil should be as destructive as now seems, possible under such circumstances, a crop of less than nine millions is not unlikely. He believes that even with the most favorable weather from now on it seems that a crop of 11,250,000 bales would be a maximum, and says that the first progeny of the new weevil seems likely to be a record one.

A cotton man who has made a study of the weevil says that when some fields fruit early they become incubators for weevil to destroy the fields that fruit later. After the second progeny of new weevil from heavy infestation appears, few squares escape. It is a matter of record that a female weevil punctures an average of 140 squares. If 50 of the 140 punctures mature the second progeny of a new weevil numbers 2,500 for each weevil that survived the winter. This indicates the reason for greater damage during the latter part of the season.

LATE COTTON
Late cotton, it is said, has a low probability of retaining fruit. Although the possible production of offspring in a single season by one pair of weevils has been estimated at 12,755,000, Nature has provided several means of preventing such excessive multiplication. The most conspicuous of these are heat and insects which prey on the weevil. As to heat, where the infested squares are subjected to the unobstructed rays of the sun the mortality is very high. Occasionally as many as 90 percent of the immature weevils in cotton fields inspected have been found to have been destroyed through this agency. The extent of destruction holds a close relation to the amount of shade. When there is no shade practically all the larvae and the pupae are killed outright. The second means provided by Nature is a large number of insect enemies.

Forty-five species which prey on the boll weevil are known. Of these, 25 are parasites, and they never feed upon vegetation. There are also twelve varieties of ants which attack the weevil besides numerous birds. If it were not for these natural enemies there would be little chance for the cotton crop. Advice from Texas during the week noted the increasing activity of weevil there and similar reports came from Oklahoma, claiming that if there should be enough rain to keep the cotton growing fast and keep the top of the ground moist, it is possible the weevil will get as bad that very little cotton will be made. However, with hot, dry weather, the weevil would do very little damage.

TO USE 1921 CROP
It is pointed out by a local student of cotton statistics that if the world's spinners continue to take American cotton at the present weekly rate from now until the end of August, they will have taken the entire production of the United States in 1921, plus more than 5,000,000 bales in addition. If this statistical anticipation proves to be correct the entire free supply of American cotton and lint in all markets of the world, at the ports and in the interior of the United States and at the ports of all foreign countries, will have been reduced to barely two and a half million bales before the fresh supplies from the present crop in the United States become available. Should the present American crop fall below the world's requirements for the coming twelve-month there will be no reserve to draw from for the purpose of making good the deficiency except this same carry-over supply of 2,500,000 bales of cotton and lint distributed through all the markets of the world. It is statistics such as the above that have induced the cotton trade the world over to protect itself either by buying actual cotton or by making contracts for cotton to be delivered in the future.

CONAN DOYLE FOR PROHIBITION

Returning, Will Advocate It For England—May Revive Sherlock Holmes

PSYCHIC DEBT PLAN

Calls It Best He's Heard—Finds Scientists Here Afraid—Writing Travel Book

New York, June 21.—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who will sail for England on the Adriatic tomorrow morning, said yesterday that he returned to England a convert to prohibition, and will advocate it for England, although he cannot spare the time from his psychic work to engage in public meeting and active propaganda. In the interim he intends, however, to have a high bell and a glass of wine now and then, he said.

Sherlock Holmes, it was learned, has not necessarily solved his last mystery. The publishers have been very insistent with Sherlock's famous creator. Yesterday Sir Arthur said he had taken no vow against reviving the world's most famous detective.

"I may write of Sherlock Holmes again," he said, "but only if some very strong idea takes hold of me. It takes nearly all my time to keep abreast of psychic work. One must keep closely informed if he himself poses as a teacher."

A recent dispatch from Atlantic City said in effect that he was creating a character who might prove "a worthy successor to Sherlock Holmes." Sir Arthur was busy at that resort, he said, writing a volume on his psychic adventures in America.

"It is to be a psychic book of travel," he said. "While books of travel in America by Englishmen are very numerous, I think this book, whether good or bad, will be of an entirely new type."

Sir Arthur will compare the psychic atmosphere of one city or section with that of others; will give his estimate of the genuineness and of the powers of some of America's most noted mediums; and will tell of the amusing and serious transactions which took place in his communications here with the departed.

FINDS SCIENTISTS TIMID

He was highly pleased over the success of his trip, having been assured that he was the only visitor from abroad who had been able to attract large crowds at seven successive lectures. The one unfavorable impression which he carried away with him, he indicated, was that of "the lack of moral courage" of America's scientific men and scholars.

"I think there is more moral courage in England than in America," he said. "There men in high positions—archdeacons, great scientists, and so forth—will say, 'These things are true and we are willing to say so, no matter what happens.'"

"Here men in like positions will privately admit that they have had wonderful psychic experiences, but will be absolutely afraid to let it become known for fear of what neighbors will think."

"My trip has been a wonderful success. The difficulties were great, because what I had to say cut right across the thoughts of many people both in their religion and their general philosophy of life. Then I had to calculate on the effect of the sense of humor, which is perhaps more acute in America than in any other part of the world."

It is easy to make fun of this subject because it is most easy to make fun of any solemn thing. I believe, however, that by my own earnestness I convinced many people of the earnestness of the subject.

TALKED WITH JAMES.
Sir Arthur said that he had an interesting conversation with the late William James. Speaking through the person of a young woman whose own style of conversation was highly colloquial, the philosopher gave instructions in elaborate, precise phrases for spreading psychic propaganda, said Sir Arthur.

"You have to recollect, sir," said James, as nearly as his utterance could be reproduced, "that it is needed that you should leave a permanent impression on your audience; and the mere ephemeral presence of one night at a meeting can hardly implant such an impression."

Sir Arthur was deeply interested in the case of Arthur E. Stillwell, retired railroad builder and promoter of this city, who recently stated that he had built nearly 3,000 miles of railroad according to plans received in his sleep from spirits and that just before the Galveston flood, he had built a new Texas port for his railroad because spirits had warned him of disaster if he built to Galveston.

"But his guardian spirit has given him another plan, which may be still more important," continued Sir Arthur. "It is a great plan to take care of the international debt and exchange situation, the only idea promising success that I have heard."

WORLD DEBT PLAN.
The idea is that every nation should pledge itself to put by some quid pro quo amount every year, bank it at some central point and issue bonds against the amount which will have accumulated sixty years from now. The bonds would pass into circulation and become currency, which is what is most needed."

Sir Arthur laughed over the hoax which he perpetrated at the dinner of the Society of American Magicians, when, with a mysterious introduction, he exhibited the mock dinosaurs and other fake behemoths of several million years ago.

"The threats of suits which resulted came from persons who saw a chance to exploit themselves," he added. "There are no patent rights involved. The film of 'The Lost World' will be produced without any legal difficulties."

On prohibition Sir Arthur said: "I go back a convert. I am a man who takes wine, but none the less I think this generation might do a noble thing to give up its comforts, if so doing will help save the next generation from the miseries resulting from drinking to excess."

"There is little drinking here today, compared to what there used to be. Today, if you want liquor, you have to go and find it. Formerly, it came looking for you."

Lady Doyle emphatically endorsed her husband's views on prohibition. She said the one shadow on the trip had been the sight of horses harnessed so that their heads and necks were drawn back into a position "where they must have suffered agonies."

"This is continually forced on your sight, especially in Washington," she said. "People so kind-hearted as Americans usually are would not be guilty of causing such suffering if they realized what they were doing."

Predicts America Again Will Admit Wines And Beers

Paris, June 24.—America is to be congratulated for the wonderful social experiment of prohibition, but the evidence is multiplying that the time is not far distant when French wines and French beer will be permitted to enter the United States, if for no other reason than to diminish the fearful increase in whisky drinking. This was the message brought back by Alfred Guy, former member of the Tardieu economic mission, who for months has been in America engaged in an investigation of the problem, which he discussed with hospital heads, chiefs of police and high political officials.

"No other country could have carried out this experiment so conclusively," M. Guy told a group of correspondents convened by Count Bernard de Mumm and the Marquis de Polignac. "It must be admitted that the saloon was a social evil, and that the prohibition campaign was therefore justified; but now the saloon has been abolished, and the time will come when a new regime will give greater liberties. The saloon itself will never be seen again."

"Yet today more whisky is being drunk in proportion to other drinks than before the war. Even the head surgeon of Bellevue Hospital told me that although he had campaigned for ten years for prohibition, today he was frightened by the number of workmen entering the hospital under the influence of hard stuff and dying in convulsions like dogs. The same official told me he was convinced that the only solution would be the admission of wines and beers, with drastic action against hard liquors."

M. Guy's investigation showed a great change in the public spirit compared with that noted on previous visits. The public were now engaged in vast violations of the law, with the social inequality due to the rich being able to buy beverages causing intense resentment among the poorer classes, which might eventually have serious political repercussions. He contended, however, that neither the increase in drug habits nor the crime wave in America was due to prohibition, ascribing the former to German exportation of narcotics and the latter to the general post-war condition, which is affecting all nations.

The fine wines formerly sent to Russia, Germany and the United States, he said, were now being exported to Mexico, Canada and Japan, the latter not a great wine consuming nation. "We are selling directly to the United States for religious and sacramental purposes some $300,000 worth of wines yearly, but indirectly we are selling much more."

Maurice Casenave, former High Commissioner in the United States, in giving his own impressions, declared that the American public must be warned that the present American definition of light wines must be changed, as it included only 4 percent alcohol, whereas French wines were not considered drinkable unless they contained 14 or 15 percent.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

July 26, 1922

Spot and forward bar silver were unchanged in London yesterday.

The New York price declined to 89 1/2 and the London-New York cross rate to 445 1/4.

The only change in the official quotations was a rise in the Franc rate to 925.

Our market throughout the day was steady although at one time during the morning it showed signs of easing off somewhat.

At the opening there were sellers of Sterling at 3 1/4 and of Gold Dollars at 77 1/4.

Banks bought at these rates and the market became slightly easier with no sellers at better than 3 1/4, 11 1/2 and 77 1/2.

The bulk of today's business being done at these rates.

However, at the close rates stand up a little, the market

closing with sellers of Sterling at 3 1/4 and of Gold Dollars at 77 1/4 for any delivery up to December.

Banks were quoting 3 1/4 for four m. Sterling bills and 75 for Gold Dollar bills.

There was little going in the London and New York silver markets yesterday both of which are reported as steady.

OIL YIELD FROM BIG BAKU AREA
SHOWS INCREASEBaku, June 26.—The output of crude oil at Baku during 1921 amounted to 2,603,000 tons, an average of 217,000 tons monthly.
Production was at its lowest during the summer months, but rose steadily after the introduc-tion of collective payments in October. This progress has been well maintained during the last three months, taking into account the fact that February is a short month, according to the following figures:

November	228,000
December	253,000
January	257,000
February	240,000
March	268,000

The number of wells being worked in January, was 1,113, and 1,155 in February. Borings during January were 1,569 feet;
during February, 2,917 feet.

Similar progress is recorded in the Gromy area, the present rate of output actually exceeding the pre-war rate, although not coming up to the level which was reached in 1916 and 1917. The output for 1921 amounted to 1,330,000 tons, an average of 111,000 tons monthly. The 1921 output was 1,227,000 tons, an average of 102,000 tons monthly.The output for January, 1922, was 119,700 tons, and for February, 117,300 tons.The number of wells working was 174 in January, and 177 in February. Difficulties of supply, both of food and equipment, are hindering the opening up of wells that fell into disuse during thelast few years, as well as new borings, during January borings only amounted to 1,041 feet, and in February, 1,004 feet.
Stocks of oil and oil products amounted to 305,600 tons on January 31 and 281,500 tons on February 28.The total number of oil-carrying vessels available in Russia, including those only suitable for the river and canal systems is 924 with an aggregate cargo capacity of 2,412,000 tons.A large number of these vessels cannot, however, be used until considerable repairs have been effected. By the beginning of the 1922 navigation in April serviceable vessels in the Volga-Caspian district numbered 321; repairs work was proceeding satisfac-torily, and in the course of May it was hoped to add a further 191 vessels to the working fleet, making the total 512 vessels, or nearly 70 percent of the total available.Work will be continued on the remaining vessels during the summer, and many more will be in serviceable condition before the end of the navigation period.
In the other less important areas
the proportion of serviceable vessels is lower, but everywhere the situation is better than it was last year.The China Mutual Life

The United States Court At Work

THE warm welcome accorded Judge Lobinger on his return to China marks the community's attitude toward his administration of the United States Court. Seldom has an official had more reason to feel gratified at the support he has received.

An unbroken record of affirmances by the Court of Appeals has now been followed by proceedings in which first the Department of Justice and then the President of the United States have placed the seal of approval upon his work.

And this result was brought about in part by the unqualified support given him by the representative American organizations in China.

That this support would not have been given without justifying merit goes without saying. Judge Lobinger has already served more than twice as long as both of his predecessors combined and his accumulating experience is a growing asset which should prove more valuable to the court with every passing year.

His recent publication of "Extraterritorial Cases" and his authorship of the article on "Extraterritoriality" in Corpus Juris disclose him as a foremost authority in that peculiar field of jurisprudence in which the court mainly functions. All in all Judge Lobinger's usefulness in the court should be greater than ever and there is reason to hope that the difficulties under which that tribunal has labored belong to the past.

The Judge faces a formidable task in clearing a docket which has been accumulating for almost a year not only in Shanghai but in the three other regular places of session. By commencing the day following his return and by preparing to hold sessions continuously during China's period of torrid heat, Judge Lobinger is carrying out the spirit of the President's instructions and in the working out of his difficult problem he will have the continued support and sympathetic co-operation of all patriotic Americans.

Editor: THE CHINA PRESS.

Dear Sir:—With reference to the picture, appearing in your this morning's paper and mentioned by you as being the "Palace of Peace," at the Hague, I beg to say that the picture represents the "Binnenhof," an old edifice, erected in about 1200 and not at all the "Palace of Peace," which was built in about 1911.

Yours faithfully,

Russian Natural Resources And Concessions

(Contributed)

THERE is a general conviction in Russia that concessions must play an important part in the rehabilitation of the country's economic life. And a foreign observer, after investigating Russian industrial conditions, is inclined to agree with this viewpoint. Russia at the present time is at once extremely rich and desperately poor. The potential mineral and agricultural wealth of the country is amazing. The coal and iron resources of the Ural and Western Siberia are enormous. In the Ural I saw a literal mountain of iron, glittering in the sunlight. It is estimated that the Kuznetsk coal basin, in Western Siberia, contains 250,000,000 tons of coal.

The Urals are also rich in precious metals, as well as uranium and copper. Over 95 percent of the world's known supply of platinum is located in these mountains; and there are also large quantities of asbestos rock. Before the war, Russia ranked second only to Canada as a producer of asbestos. Russia is also known to contain rich deposits of mica, tungsten, lead, zinc, silver, aluminum, nickel and vanadium. The oil in the Caucasus region, around Baku and Grozny, is equalled by still unexplored deposits in other parts of Russia and Siberia.

The agricultural possibilities of Russia are equally impressive. Great stretches of Siberia and the Ukraine are extremely fertile, capable of producing all the ordinary grains in large quantities. Cotton and silk are cultivated in Turkestan in Asiatic Russia; and flax is grown in the northern and central provinces of European Russia. The timber resources of the country are vast enough to supply the needs of the whole world.

And yet, in the midst of all this natural wealth, the city population is underfed; and the peasants lack the simplest articles of daily use. On our railroad journey through Russia we obtained food from the peasants at the way stations by giving them buttons and needles in exchange.

There are several reasons for this economic misadjustment. In the first place the World War placed great strain upon the Russian industrial system, stopping, or curtailing nonmilitary production, withdrawing skilled men from industry, cutting off the essential supplies of machinery which Russia had been accustomed to import from abroad. This condition was aggravated by the civil war and the Allied blockade. On my trip through the Urals and Western Siberia I was repeatedly impressed with the idea that Russia's industrial recovery was being held back for lack of a year's secure food supply for the industrial workers. During the war the needs of the army came first, and the city workers were compelled to go on short rations. Then, after the war, came the famine; and all available foodstuffs had to be rushed to the afflicted districts. As a result I often found factories in good physical condition, with adequate stocks of raw material, standing idle simply because it had been found impossible to provision the workers adequately.

So the Russian economic situation may be briefly summed up as follows: An enormous amount of wealth in the shape of natural resources is locked up in a country that cannot develop them because it has been stripped bare by a long period of war and isolation from the outside world. The obvious remedy is to call in the assistance of foreign capital; and this is just what the Russian Government is doing. The text of the following official decree on concessions indicates the principles which will govern the Russian Government in its attitude toward foreign concessions:

"In order to apply the principle of concessions in the broadest sense for the purpose of rehabilitating and strengthening the industries of the Republic, the Council of People's Commissars has resolved to publish the following general economic and legal conditions for concessions, as well as to enumerate the objects of the concession agreements which may be concluded with sound and trustworthy foreign industrial corporations and associations.

"1. The concessionaire receives as profit a part of the product, fixed in the agreement, which he may export abroad.

"2. If the concessionaire introduces improvements on a large scale, he will be offered trading privileges (special agreements in regard to large orders, etc.)

"3. Dependent on the nature and conditions of the case, concessions will be granted for long terms in order to guarantee full compensation to the concessionaire for the risk involved and for the investment.

"4. The Government of Soviet Russia guarantees that the investments made by the concessionaire shall not be subject to nationalization, confiscation, or expropriation.

"5. The concessionaire has the right to hire workmen and employees for his undertakings in the territory of Soviet Russia in accordance with the code of Labor Laws, or by special agreement, guaranteeing the observance of labor regulations covering the life and health of the workmen and employees.

"6. The Government of Soviet Russia guarantees the concessionaire against one-sided changes in the terms of the agreement by any subsequent rules or decrees of the Government."

The Russian Government may be said to have taken economic rehabilitation as its permanent campaign slogan. All classes of the people, including many former opponents of the Soviet Government, are co-operating vigorously in the great task of national reconstruction. Outside of the obvious difficulties inherent in the rebuilding of any war-wrecked country, the outlook for commercial relations between Russia and the outside world is excellent. The Russian Government is welcoming offers of capital for the development of its natural resources. In the shape of concessions, as well as proposals for large-scale trading. The interests of the foreign trader or concessionaire in stimulating production and exchange coincide precisely with those of the Russian Government and people.

The objection to commercial relations with Russia on the ground that the Soviet Government cannot be relied on to carry out its contracts, rests upon a complete misreading of Russian facts. The men who control Russia's political destinies at the present time have a very clear appreciation of the economic realities of the situation. They see Russia for what it is: a country of enormous potential wealth in agricultural and mineral resources, temporarily reduced to acute poverty by the strain of seven years of foreign and domestic warfare. They realize that outside aid is essential for the rehabilitation of Russian industry and transport. And they know that the co-operation of foreign capital can only be secured, by fair and considerate treatment.

Putting aside all questions of good faith, it is simply absurd to suppose that the Soviet Government would defeat its own purpose of obtaining larger and more efficient production with the help of outside capital by subjecting foreign traders or concessionaires to harsh or impracticable conditions. There can be no question that all the energy of the Russian Government and people is now being concentrated upon what is called the economic front, upon the task of building up the shattered industrial life of the nation. With this end in view the Soviet Government has radically changed its economic policy last spring. A definite tax was substituted for the requisitioning of the peasant's whole surplus produce. Provision was made for the leasing to individuals or associations of industrial establishments which the state could not operate economically. Every possible stimulus was offered to increased production, both in agriculture and in industry.

To be sure the development of Russian natural resources is a big job; but it is not as big as the opening up of the Far West of the United States after the Civil War. Much of the preliminary work has already been done. Russia has mines, factories and railroads; and its whole industrial equipment, so far as is observed, is in fairly good physical condition. What is needed is an infusion of foreign capital to effect necessary minor repairs, to ensure an adequate labor force and to initiate the work of exploiting Russia's great sources of untapped natural wealth. The Russian Government is prepared to pay for this outside help by granting concessions on the most liberal terms and by affording the concessionaire all possible economic assistance. For the sake of its own prestige it is bound to hope that the foreign capitalist will be able to show large production figures.

Barrie To The Critics

Sir James M. Barrie is one of the most frequent of speech-makers. The following address was made at a dinner of the Critics Circle at the Hotel Savoy in London of a few weeks ago. It is reprinted from the London Times.

I remember once going the length of very nearly reading a critic's review of my work. It was, I am sure, quite possibly the most interesting I have ever read. It was many years ago, before I had written any plays, which read blood-letting in my veins. It is not a bad story, though unfortunately the critic comes rather well out of it; indeed, I would not repeat it here except that I come rather well out of it also. It marks the night when I decided upon a rule of conduct with regard to you gentlemen, which, so far as I can remember, I have never broken. A historic occasion for me, therefore, and I am sorry I cannot remember what the weather was like.

The critic was one of my first books, a Scotch novel, and the critic was a man to whom I suppose every one here would take off his hat in homage and in proud memory—Andrew Lang. He not only slaughtered my book, but attacked my Scotch and picked out one word in particular as being Scotch at all. To be as particular as that is perhaps as ways a mistake in criticism, and I thought I had him. I wrote a brief letter to that paper saying that this word was not only good Scotch, but was in frequent use in the "Waverley" in which, that I could tell Sir James in which, but that as he was at present editing them he would find them all worth reading. I then put the letter in my desk and went exultantly to bed.

But there was something wrong about it and I could not sleep, and somewhere in the early hours I made up my mind to tear up that letter and never in my life to answer criticism. These two vows I have kept, and in both cases with a happy result. A few days afterwards Mr. Lang wrote in that same paper—and you are good men if you can do what Lang did—saying that he was rather unhappy about his review because he considered, on reflection, that he had not been quite fair to the book. Well, that led to a friendship much valued by me, though the word was never referred to between us. As for the other half of my vow, I like to think it is part of the reason why you have done me the honor of asking me here tonight.

Not, of course, that there is anything objectionable in our arguing with one another, but the other way seems to suit me best. Sometimes I must admit it has been rather a close thing. Several times I have indited a reply, saying "Oh, indeed?" or something stinging like that; but my post-box is at the far end of the street and there is also time for reflection when one is putting on one's muffler. So the retort is never sent, though if the post-box were nearer or the number round twice, there is no telling. I have never even answered Mr. Shaw, though in the days when he was a critic he began an article on a play of mine with some such words as these, "This is worse than Shakespeare." I admit that this rankled. I wish I could think, gentlemen, that my forbearance toward you is owing to deeply artistic reasons; but no, it is merely because I forever see the fates hanging over you and about you stretch forth a claw. However you may ram it in—I refer to the rapier—I have a fear that something disastrous is about to happen to you in the so much more important part of your life that has nothing to do with the pen—bad news, ill health, sudden loss; and so I forgive you and tear up. I am even letting you off cheaply tonight, in case one of you is run over on the way home, as I have a presentiment is going to happen. How easy it would be for some incensed author to follow a critic or two to their office on a first night and give them a sudden push as a bus came along. But I dare say you are all rather nippy at the curbstones.

So you see it is no use my attempting to talk to you about the drama of tomorrow. That secret lies with the young, and I beg of you not to turn away from them impatiently because of their "know-nothings," as Mr. Hardy calls it in his new book. The young writers know as much about nothing as we know about everything. Yet they suffer much from the abnormal conditions of the stage. Through them only shall its salvation come. Give them every friendly consideration, if only because they belong to the diminishing handful which does not call a play a snow, "have you seen our show?" "I call that a nice little show." Heigho! Has the time come, gentlemen, for us all to pack up and depart? No, no, the drama will bloom again, though it will not be in that garden. Mr. Milne is a very fine tulip already, and there are others for you to water. Miss Dane has proved that the ladies have arrived. For my part, anything I can suggest for the drama's betterment is so simple that I am sure it must be wrong. I feel we have all become too self-conscious about the little parts we play—they are little parts even in our own little lives. If we talked less about how things should be done, there might be more time for doing them. Suppose we were to have a close season, in which we confined ourselves to trying to write our plays better, act them better, produce them better, criticize them better? But it can't be so simple as that.

I wish I could write mine better, and I presume I am revealing no secret when I tell you that the only reason I don't is because I can't. If there were any other reason, I should deserve the contempt of everyone of you. I remember my earliest lesson in that.

For several days after my first book was published I carried it about in my pocket, and took surreptitious peeps at it to make sure that the ink had not faded. I watched a bookshop where it was exposed on a shelf outside the window, and one day a lady—most attractive—picked up my book and read whole paragraphs, said it down, went away, came back, read more paragraphs, felt for her purse, but finally went away without buying. I have always thought that if my book had been a little bit better she would have bought it. "The little more and how much it is." In that case a shilling. But what should be written up behind the scenes is "The little less and now much it is."

You have all in the course of earning your livelihood applied adjectives to me, but the only criticism that makes me writhe is that observation of Mr. Shaw's which I have already quoted. I wonder if he has changed his mind? He has changed all sorts of things. Here I might begin to be gloomy. None of your adjectives gets to the mark as much as one I have found for myself—"Criticism's Barrie." I saw how much it once strikes you all. A bitter pill; but it looks as if on one subject I were the best critic in the room.

Your word for me would probably be fantastic. I was quite prepared to hear it from your Chairman, because I felt he could not be so shabby as to say whimsical, and that he might forget to say elusive. If you knew how dejected those terms have often made me, I am quite serious. I never believed I was any of those things until you dinned them into me. Few have tried harder to be simple and direct. I have also always thought that I was rather realistic. In this matter, gentlemen, if I may say it without any ill-feeling, as indeed I do, you have damped me a good deal, and sometimes put out the light altogether. It is a terrible business if one is to have no sense at all about his own work. Wandering in darkness. To return to cheerier topics. I don't often go to the theater, though I always go to Mr. Shaw's plays, not so much for the ordinary reasons as to see whether I can find an explanation for that extraordinary remark of his. "But I will tell you what I think is the best play written in my time. My reason for considering it the best is that I have thought most about since, not perhaps a bad test. I mean Pinero's 'Iris.' One more confession—I will tell you what has pleased me most about any play of mine. It is that everything included, and the dresses coming from the theater wardrobe, the production of one of them, a little one, it is true, 'The Twelve-Pound Look,' cost just under £5.

My not going often to the theater is not because I don't like it, but because the things I like best about it can be seen without actually going in. I like to gaze at the actors, not when dressed for their parts, but as they emerge by the stage door. I have never got past the satisfaction of this and it is heightened when the play is my own. The stage doorkeeper is still to me the most romantic figure in any theater and I hope he is the best paid. I have even tried to dart past him, but he never knows me, and I am promptly turned back. I wait, though, in the crowd, which usually consists of about four or six persons, not of the elite, and when the star comes out they cheer and I hiss. I mean just the same as they do, but I hiss. This sometimes leads to momentary trouble with the other letterers, but in the end we adjourn inoffensively to a coffee stall, where I stand treat, and where we were caught by a cinema machine a few months ago.

You may sometimes wonder why I write so much about islands, and indeed I have noticed a certain restiveness in some of you on the subject. There are more islands in my plays than any of you are aware of. I have the cunning to call them by other names. There is one thing I am really good at, and that is at slipping in an island. I dare say it is those islands that make you misunderstand me. I would feel as if I had left off clothing if I were to write without an island. Now, could there be a more realistic statement than that? At scrutinizes the argument and its charming illustrations, one may perhaps find that doubts are engendered. It all seems too easy; health cannot, declares the skeptic, be won on such simple terms—without a pill or a pocket-book—for here is a plan that costs nothing. But further reflection compels the conclusion that a sane and truly helpful philosophy of daily regimen is here set forth. Regarded purely as a piece of literature in essay form, "Invisible Exercise" makes delightful reading. The author, as he has long since demonstrated in a dozen books, lives his own independent, "piquant" way of saying his say. He is an idealist whose whimsicality and apparent exaggerations of method hide a deep of shrewd Yankee common sense. He is intensely social in his aims and aspirations, a fine democrat and humanitarian. So, looked at as a guide to a better kind of living, the present volume is well worth paying attention to and giving a trial. It would be a sad blunder to take it as a bit of satiric tooling. On the contrary, it is a real contribution to the discussion of a subject of vital import to all human beings: since to be well is to be happy.

Barrie To The Critics

(Continued from Page 12) present I am residing on an island. It is called Typee, and so you will not be surprised to hear that my companion's name is Fyaway. She is a dusky maid, composed of abstractions, but not in the least elusive. She is just little bits of the golden girls who have acted for me and saved my plays. There is not one of them whom I have not watched for at the stage door and hissed ecstatically. She moves about my coral isle with the swallow-tails of Ellen Terry, and melts into the incomparable Maude Adams. She has Irene Vanburgh's eyes, to light the beacons to scare the ships away; and there are bits in her of many other dear sirens who, little aware of what I have plucked, think that they are appearing complete tonight in London.

"With here and there a Peter Pan.

And here and there Fay Compton. And everywhere Trevelyan."

Forbes Robertson retired so that he could lend to us, on the island, his silver voice, and du Maurier pulls in with Bancroft to make sure that we are not acting. There is no theater as yet, but Charles Frohman is looking for a site. For the dead are here, also, and you can hardly distinguish them from the living. The laughing Irving boys arrive in a skiff, trying to capsize each other; and on magic nights there is Sir Henry himself, pacing along the beach, a solitary figure. If Shakespeare were to touch upon our shores, he would offer to sell us Fame at a penny the yard—no bidders. Sometimes a play is written and put into a bottle and cast into the sea. I expect it never reaches you; at any rate, if it is whimsical that is not it. Fyaway has a native name for me which means "The Inoffensive One."

Come to our island when you feel you have been sufficiently mauled by the rocks of life, and we will give you grassy huts. You can still write criticisms. Bring your bottles. As I may say that A. R. W.'s hut stands waiting him, a specially attractive one, with palms and a running stream. We had a long discussion about Mr. Shaw, but we have decided to let him land. I thank you heartily, gentlemen, for the high honor you have done me. Mutual respect, I am sure, all we ask of each other. It must be obvious to you that in making such a long speech I had two main objects, to try a new title on you, "The Inoffensive Gentleman," and to watch whether I thought you could stand one more island.

Gentle Gymnastics

Invisible Exercise. By Gerald Stanley Lee, E. P. Dutton & Co.

Short cuts to health are always with us. Humanity can be counted on not to feel well and to want to do something about it. Medicine, once a universal panacea, begins to be looked at askance, even by the doctors themselves. Hence most of us at one time or another have gone to Muldoon or Fletcherized or tried the cold water cure—this last peculiarly fitting, not to say convenient, of late. It is pathetic, really, how people will grab for the newest therapeutic fad or fancy. Nothing daunted by the situation, here comes Mr. Gerald Stanley Lee, and in his characteristically quaint, humorous book, "Invisible Exercise," after enumerating twenty-nine other First Aids to the Sick, offers number thirty himself. Moreover, to judge by the present reviewer, he converts the reader to this latest way-to-well being. As always with him, he takes one into his confidence and with a shameless and most engaging use of the first person and with the unconventional idiom that is so distinctively his tells how he came to realize that the trouble with the other schemes to keep a sound mind in a sound body was that they were too elaborate, too outside from daily living; going to Mudlavia for baths is a nuisance to the ever busy American.

"Invisible Exercise," then, is a true short cut. It consists of learning to walk, sit, stand and lie down as you are always doing one of things. And as you are always doing one of them from the cradle to the grave, all life is covered, and yet you have not done anything apart from your regular work, your day-by-day necessary activity. That's the beauty of it. For there is nothing we Americans want more than to get quick results.

Mr. Lee got his first cue, it appears, from riding a horse. The way you sit the animal, the balancing you find necessary in that invigorating form of exercise, has only to be applied to the way you sit on a chair and the way you stand, walk and lie in your bed, to teach the secret of such right handling of the human machine as shall result in an exhilarating tangle of physical consciousness. Instead of the half dead fashion in which most folk drag through the hours you become alert and alive, and even to stand and look out of a window is an adventure. With "Invisible Exercise" understood and put into practice even so negative, inert an act as lying abed has its zip and its zest. So runs the argument.

Mr. Lee explains it all in so clear and amusing a manner that two things are likely to happen to one who peruses the volume. First, it appeals as very plausible and worth trying. A distinct impulse toward putting the theory into practice in his own person seizes the student. And second, after he has experimented a little, beginning with the pedestrian aspect as the easiest to manage, then going on to apply the principle of rhythmic balance to the sister acts of standing and sitting, enough result follows to breed confidence. What seemed plausible becomes rational in the trial. Frankly, lying down as a form of invisible exercise presents greater difficulty; at first blush, indeed, it seems rather formidable. But the experimenter is encouraged by his experience with the other applications of the idea to keep on and have faith in ultimate complete success.

To be sure, when one has backed off from the book and in cold blood

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

Scuttling Case In London Court

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 25.—Another case of the scuttling of a Greek steamer was heard before the King's Bench today when two Greek merchants and ship-owners sued the British and Foreign Marine Insurance Company to recover insurance on the s.s. Jolanda, abandoned on the Goodwin in December 1920.

Justice Rowlatt said that the vessel was insured for £20,000 but was not worth more than a third of that amount.

He gave judgment for the defendants, who contended that the ship was scuttled by an engineer, the plaintiffs being privy to the act.

Sun's Capture Of Li Yuan Confirmed

(China Press Correspondence)

Anking, July 22.—News that the south troops formerly under Dr. Sun Yat-sen have captured Li Yuan, Anhui, has been confirmed. These soldiers, about five hundred strong, constituted a section of the Anti-Northern Expedition and were under the command of Colonel Fan Chin-wu, in charge of the air squadron of the Expeditionary Forces.

All the soldiers were experienced crack shots and the capture of Li Yuan was done with little difficulty, because they were joined by local Kuomintang sympathisers in Anhui, about 1,500 in number. Half of the section has now been despatched to Tungchi, one of the best known commercial centers of the province which forms the important gateway to Huichow, the district of unbridled wealth.

It is difficult for the Northern forces to attack the Southern units on account of the strategy. In view of the lack of discipline among the government troops, known as the An Wu Army, the local organisations in Huichow, Li Yuan and Tung-chi are planning to resist the entry of the An Wu Army and are supporting the Southern forces with funds and arms.

Chen's Soldiers Beaten By Sun

(Eastern News Agency)

Canton, July 24.—Equating reports from various sources, it appears that the troops under the command of General Chen have inflicted losses numbering some 2,000, in killed and wounded, upon the anti-Northern expeditionary forces, but on July 15 the Chen forces incurred more than 2,000 killed and wounded at the hands of the Sun's troops.

The fighting in the district of Wengyuan is practically an even break as yet. The topography of the district is very steep and rugged, and the fighting has made only small geographical changes in the positions of the two forces.

"My Dear Friend," Baron Hayashi To Germany's Envoy

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 25.—Baron Hayashi, responding to the toast of the guests at the dinner last night in celebration of the jubilee of the Eastern and Associated Cable Companies, eulogised the work of the staff in maintaining communication with the East during the war, notwithstanding the mischance wrought by the Emden.

The Japanese Ambassador proceeded to refer to the world situation, alluding to the German Ambassador, who sat next to him, as "my dear friend."

The speaker declared that they had legal peace. They must now have moral peace and all over the world friendship must prevail.

He regarded it as the first duty of all people to promote that peace.

Veteran's Official Attacks President Harding's Doctor

(China Press Service)

Chicago, July 25.—Colonel A. E. Sprague, chairman of the American Legion National Rehabilitation Committee has written Brigadier General C. E. Sawyer, personal physician to President Harding and one of the directors of federal hospitals, declaring that Sawyer is standing in the way of proper care of the wounded and aid to veterans.

The letter states that Sawyer does not possess the necessary experience and asks that he step aside for more efficient and careful management of federal hospitals.

Japan's Shippers Hit At Government

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, July 19.—A meeting yesterday at the Maritime Transportation Club in Kobe of ship-owners and others interested in shipping passed the following resolution:

"The Government seems to be without fixed policy regarding the ever declining shipping enterprise of the Empire, since the restoration of peace. If the country is to maintain its position as a present among the world powers in shipping more positive efforts should be made by the authorities for the improvement of the situation."

The meeting appointed a committee of nine who will submit to the Government the above resolution.
